

Elite-Combo Results

On Saturday, we backed two low-value winners from three betting races (four bets) for a small profit on the day.

The two bets in the third qualifying race finished 2nd and 3rd, beaten by a 20/1 dry track leader who came from behind in the heavy 8!

Elite Combo Bet-Scale

As mentioned in the previous newsletter, we are re-working the Elite-Combo bet scale based on the telling figures provided.

We have been looking deeper at going/distance stats and are sure that many members would like to see these early analysis figures of all bets since January 2021.

All the following data is sourced from your members spreadsheet

Elite-Combo-2021-2026-Members-Spreadsheet Excel to June 3rd, 2026.

Please note that the PLACE analysis is based on $100 level bets at mid-tote div, which everyone should be able to access. (check with your bookie).

1) Dry Tracks and shorter distances (< 1700m).

- This is our sweet spot with consistent profits even through bad runs.
- In this range, the $50 bets are punching above their weight

Going less than 6 and Distance less than 1700m

2) Dry Tracks and longer distances (>= 1700m).

- Good stats overall.
- Obvious performance discrepancies with the current bet-scales.

3) Wet Tracks (6-10) and shorter distances (< 1700m).

- Pretty good overall.
- Definite opportunities to re-visit the bet scale.

4) Wet Tracks (6-10) and longer distances (>= 1700m).

- This is the clear weak link. Low strike rates (22.9% overall) and low average winning odds ($3.45).
- 12.8% LOSS for the win and 15.6% LOSS for the place (only 50% pace-getters).
- Fortunately, these bets only account for 5% of all bets.

There are many other variables to be considered so it's early days with the bet scale review. We just wanted to share with interested members the data that we are considering so far.

Many members do this research themselves and already have personal parameters in place.

We have added a column (Column AS) to your members spreadsheet that lists the going/dist for you.
