Elite Combo

Elite Combo had five qualifiers on Saturday. Two came with controversy or concern. Those members heeding our recommendation to discard Opt-in Scale #1 qualifiers would have discarded In'Kantosstar. That won at $4.20.

The second source of annoyance is the listing of Sheza Alibi whose am odds were $1.40.

First let's deal with the opt-in #1 horse In'Kantosstar.

Since 2021, the Opt-In Scale # 1 horses have now won 17 from 89. That's just 20% strike-rate and the loss on turnover for them is $1,818.

They do win occasionally and 52% come a place but they are a long-term losing proposition. No drama there.

Now to Sheza Alibi.

We are never comfortable listing very short-priced qualifiers.

Since January 2021, the less than $2.00 qualifiers' tally is 55. That's about 9 per year.

31 of those won. That's 56.4% @ $1.72 average div.

$5,980 outlay for a loss of $ 87 equates to – 1.5% on turnover. That's virtually break even.

47 placed (85%) and amazingly made + 2.0% profit for the place (Mid tote)

We would be happy to NOT list the less than $2.00 (am odds) qualifiers but would first like to consider feedback from members who may have a good reason for them to be listed.

There are probably members who are parlaying these qualifiers.

The current run of consecutive placegetters for the less than $2.00 Elite Combo qualifiers is 25. 16 winners and 9 seconds.

Nationwide

Nationwide members had a great day on Saturday with four winners from the seven bets. The winning dividends averaged $4.14.

$960 profit was added to bank.

Nationwide-Best is well into its recovery after a bleak May and June where the loss was $940. Since then the net profit is + $1,870.

31 winners from 85 bets = 36% winners.

The worm always turns and Elite Combo will do the same at any time.

Elite-Combo v Nationwide, Timing of Losing Runs.

Elite-Combo and Nationwide-Best strategies are completely different concepts. It is interesting how their winning/losing streaks are mostly at different times.

This table compares the timing of losing periods of three consecutive days or more going back to August 2023.

Nationwide	Consecutive Losing Days	Elite-Combo	Consecutive Losing Days
Sept 23	5
Nov 23	3
		Dec 23	4

Betting both strategies obviously smooths the ride.

Banks for Elite-Combo and Nationwide Best

Platinum members are in the great position where they can apply banks to Elite-Combo and Nationwide Best. This concept was covered in great detail some time ago.

Elite-Combo is producing nearly double the profit of Nationwide over the long-term.

To set up a single bank to bet all qualifiers from both plans, allocation of total funds around 60% Elite Combo and 40% Nationwide would be prudent.

The pdf and spreadsheet provided should help with any decision to apply separate banks for each strategy or one bank for both.

As promised last week, all spreadsheets and PDFs are up to date online.

That includes the Nat+Elite Combo data.

This snippet from your excel spreadsheet shows:
